

Quilting Water

Instructions for Gathering a Quilting Water Interview:

Thank you for gathering to share these stories about water's past, present, and future. We welcome any video, audio, image, and/or text files that result from your conversation. We value your joy and participation over high production quality or other professional values. Feel free to use whatever medium works best for you—a phone camera/microphone is perfectly fine.

The five invitations:

Please share one memory of water.

What stories have been passed on to you about water?

What has water given you?

What has water taken away?

What do you wish/dream for water?

Note: It is fine to ask some or all of these invitations.

Before the interview begins, please ask this preliminary question: “Do you give the Quilting Water project permission to archive your responses in this interview and to use them in research, publication, art, and promotional activities?” It is fine if the interviewee says no to any part of this! Just let us know their response.

Upload Quilting Water interviews with this Google Form.

Note: Uploading gives implicit permission to archive the video.