NON-ACADEMIC EMPLOYMENT

- 2002 – 2007 Staff writer at The Philadelphia Inquirer in Philadelphia, Pa.
I covered courts, general assignment, and immigration, including the post-9/11 profiling of South Asian and Middle Eastern communities and the Congressional debate on undocumented immigrants. In Spring 2005, I anchored the Baghdad bureau for the paper's parent company Knight Ridder, delivering front-page enterprise despite the risks of on-the-ground reporting during the Iraq war.
- 2000 – 2001 Staff writer at The Austin American-Statesman in Austin, Texas.
I covered the Texas House of Representatives, Census 2000, demographics, and state government and broke the story that the mining industry financed an environmental textbook approved by the Texas education board.
- 1998 – 1999 Suburban staff writer at The Philadelphia Inquirer in Cherry Hill, New Jersey.
I covered local government, schools, and police in the newspaper's South Jersey bureau, focusing on several municipalities in Camden County, New Jersey.
- 1997 – 1998 Consumer Columnist at The Jersey Journal in Jersey City, New Jersey.
My first job in journalism was as FIXIT, the consumer troubleshooting columnist for my hometown newspaper in Jersey City, New Jersey. My work there included an investigation of the rent-to-own industry that won first place for business writing from the New Jersey Society of Professional Journalists.
