

A Black woman with her hair in braids, shown in profile. She has intricate gold body paint designs on her forehead, cheeks, chin, and neck. The background is dark.

Plait/Form

A RAGE LAB Black Feminist
Public Works Incubator

MONDAY, JUNE 8 – THURSDAY, JUNE 11, 2026
RUTGERS UNIVERSITY-NEW BRUNSWICK

Plait/Form

A RAGE LAB Black Feminist
Public Works Incubator

This signature Black Feminist Public Works Incubator is proudly sponsored by:

Ford Foundation

WELCOME

June 8, 2026

Dear Black Feminists:

I am so delighted to welcome you to Plait/Form 2026, a Black Feminist Public Works Incubator housed at the Rutgers Race and Gender Equity (RAGE) Lab.

Plait/Form began with a question: “What does Black feminism look like in public?” and your work is part of the answer. I envisioned this incubator to intensively support shaping and scaling projects that advance Black feminist ideals in one of three ways: 1) innovate on new modes and methods of disseminating or translating Black Feminism to broad audiences, 2) connect new or underserved communities to Black Feminism, and/or 3) center collective and inclusive approaches to doing Black Feminism. Much like the nightly plaiting practice that has shaped so much of Black communal intimacies, including Black women and girls’ hair care traditions, Plait/Form offers a space to intentionally bring together the strands of thinking, teaching, and creating that anchor Black feminist public life.

Over the next several days, you will build relationships grounded in a feminist ethic of care, be mentored by scholars and professionals working across academic, media, and publishing institutions, and deepen your engagement with a Black feminist politic. This incubator will provide a meeting place to reflect on the forms that the braiding together of ideas might take.

The ask of you is to be fully present, lean into this opportunity, and share feedback as generously as you receive it. Welcome!

Warmly,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "BC Cooper".

Brittney C. Cooper, Ph.D.

Professor

Women’s, Gender, and Sexuality Studies

Principal Investigator

Rutgers RAGE Lab

PROGRAM

MONDAY, JUNE 8, 2026 WELCOME

Women's, Gender, and Sexuality Studies
Ruth Dill Johnson Crockett Building, 1st Floor
162 Ryders Lane, New Brunswick, NJ 08901

5:00 PM	Arrival and Check In
5:15 - 6:30 PM	Opening Dinner, Introductions, and Grounding
6:30 - 8:00 PM	Craft Activity

TUESDAY, JUNE 9, 2026 WHAT?

8:30 - 9:00 AM	Breakfast
9:00 - 9:45 AM	Morning Mindfulness and Grounding
9:45 - 11:15 AM	Masterclass: Brittany Packnett Cunningham
11:15 - 11:30 AM	Break
11:30 AM - 2:00 PM	Rotating Pitch Prep and Individual Coaching
1:00 - 2:00 PM	Lunch
2:00 - 3:30 PM	Masterclass: Brittney Cooper

PROGRAM

3:30 - 3:45 PM	Break
3:45 - 4:45 PM	Group Coaching
4:45 - 5:00 PM	Mindful Closing
5:00 - 6:00 PM	Dinner

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 10, 2026 HOW?

8:30 - 9:00 AM	Breakfast
9:00 - 9:15 AM	Morning Mindfulness and Grounding
9:15 - 10:15 AM	Pitch Prep
10:15 - 11:15 AM	Masterclass: Tanya McKinnon
11:15 - 11:30 AM	Break
11:30 AM - 12:30 PM	Masterclass: Jamia Wilson
12:30 - 1:45 PM	Lunch and Talk Back
1:45 - 3:30 PM	Masterclass: Monique Couvson
3:30 - 3:45 PM	Break

PROGRAM

3:45 - 4:15 PM	Talkback with coaches and facilitators
4:15 - 5:30 PM	Final Pitch Prep
5:00 - 6:00 PM	Dinner

THURSDAY, JUNE 11, 2026 DO! PITCH/PROJECT PLAN WHAT ARE YOU GOING TO DO NEXT?

8:30 - 9:00 AM	Breakfast
9:00 - 9:30 AM	Project I
9:30 - 10:00 AM	Project II
10:00 - 10:30 AM	Project III
10:30 - 10:45 AM	Break
10:45 - 11:15 AM	Project IV
11:15 - 11:45 AM	Project V
11:45 AM - 12:15 PM	Project VI
12:15 - 1:15 PM	Lunch

PROGRAM

1:15 - 1:45 PM	Project VII
1:45 - 2:15 PM	Project VIII
2:15 - 2:45 PM	Project IX
2:45 - 3:00 PM	Break
3:00 - 3:30 PM	Project X
3:30 - 4:00 PM	Project XI
4:00 - 5:00 PM	Group Talkback
5:00 - 6:00 PM	Dinner and happy hour

Plait/Form
A RAGE LAB Black Feminist
Public Works Incubator

COHORT PARTICIPANTS

Kay Coghill is an educator and organizer whose research focuses on digital misogynoir. They are the Community Safety and Support Steward for Blacksky Algorithms, and they also serve as the Associate Director of the Black Girlhood Fellowship and Board member at Justice For Black Girls.

Plait/Form Project: Black Girls Dream in Public

Black Girls Dream in Public is a collective digital storytelling and public scholarship project that centers Black girls and gender-expansive youth as creators of knowledge about mental health, belonging, and thriving. Through participatory workshops, participants engage in storytelling, photovoice, and collaborative media-making to reflect on their lived experiences and shape narratives on their own terms. The project will produce a digital storytelling campaign alongside a practical toolkit for educators, counselors, and community leaders. Grounded in Black feminist thought, this work amplifies youth voice, challenges deficit narratives, and offers accessible, culturally responsive approaches to supporting Black girls' wellbeing in schools and communities.

Ibriana Garvey, MPH, is a public health professional advancing Black women's reproductive health and sexual wellness. Using a social and behavioral lens, she identifies systemic drivers of health disparities to inform equitable interventions. She holds a Master's of Public Health from Temple University and a Bachelor of Science from Penn State University.

Plait/Form Project: Consumable Bodies: The Scent of Black Womanhood

Consumable Bodies is an immersive, sensory, and digital project examining how Black women's bodies are judged, disciplined, and made desirable through scent. Moving beyond basic ideas of hygiene, it explores how smell shapes perceptions of cleanliness, desirability, and social value.

COHORT PARTICIPANTS

Grounded in research on olfactory misogyny, the project asks: What does a Black female body have to smell like to be acceptable—and who decides? Conceptualized as an interactive exhibit, Consumable Bodies will use scent-based encounters, storytelling, and community voices to reveal how these expectations are created, enforced, and lived, inviting audiences to rethink how bodies are experienced through smell.

Wendasha Jenkins Hall, PhD, is an Atlanta-based sexuality researcher, educator, and public scholar with over two decades of experience in sexual health. Her work examines how history, culture, and popular media shape understandings of Black women's bodies, sexuality, and wellbeing through pleasure-centered, intersectional frameworks grounded in Black feminist thought.

Plait/Form Project: Consumable Bodies: The Scent of Black Womanhood

Consumable Bodies is an immersive, sensory, and digital project examining how Black women's bodies are judged, disciplined, and made desirable through scent. Moving beyond basic ideas of hygiene, it explores how smell shapes perceptions of cleanliness, desirability, and social value. Grounded in research on olfactory misogyny, the project asks: What does a Black female body have to smell like to be acceptable—and who decides? Conceptualized as an interactive exhibit, Consumable Bodies will use scent-based encounters, storytelling, and community voices to reveal how these expectations are created, enforced, and lived, inviting audiences to rethink how bodies are experienced through smell.

Plait/Form

A RAGE LAB Black Feminist
Public Works Incubator

COHORT PARTICIPANTS

Morgan Holloman is a graduate of Washington University in St. Louis where she studied African/African American Studies. She's the founder of Black Girls Know/Black Girlhood Archive. As an archivist, full-spectrum doula and a mother of three Black girls, her work centers the liberation and safety of Black girls. Black girlhood today.

Plait/Form Project: The Black Girlhood Archive (Black Girls Know Best)

The Black Girlhood Archive is a living repository dedicated to documenting, preserving, and interpreting the experiences of Black girls. Our work centers the social, cultural, contemporary, and historical dimensions of Black girlhood, recognizing that Black girls have shaped and continue to shape their communities, culture, and history.

The archive gathers stories, artifacts, media, oral histories, and cultural productions that reflect the breadth of Black girl life across time and place. It functions as a scholarly and community-centered project, bridging research, storytelling, and public knowledge production. The work challenges erasure, expands historical narratives, and affirms Black girlhood intellectual, cultural, and political significance.

Krystal Hope

A first-generation Afro-Guyanese American rose from the concrete of New York City. Hope is a subversive, pro-Black feminist who experiments at the intersections of cultures to identify opportunities for collective liberation. She critiques homogeneity and promotes subaltern representation in media. Service to the community keeps her grounded in the work.

Plait/Form Project: To Be Seen & Heard

“Black August: To Be Seen & Heard,” utilizes digital multimedia tools, texts, and archival materials to honor and explore the contributions of Black women during the era of the Black Panther Party.

COHORT PARTICIPANTS

Kelli King-Jackson, a Certified Professional Coach and philanthropic advisor, leads a social impact firm that specializes in leadership coaching. Her extensive coaching experience includes over 900 hours with Black women and femmes in predominantly white environments. A former foundation executive, she is also the co-founder of the Bayou Collective, a giving circle that invests in Black-led organizations in Houston. Additionally, she co-hosts the This Womanist Work podcast, where she explores politics, faith, and community through a womanist lens.

Plait/Form Project: This Womanist Work Podcast

This Womanist Work is a podcast for Black women doing the slow, necessary work of getting free. Hosted by Dr. Kendra Janelle Ross and Kelli King-Jackson, the show explores the intersections of faith, politics, pop culture, and womanist thought through the intimacy of a decades-long friendship. Across 29 episodes, guests have included hip hop womanist EbonyJanice, CNN political commentator Ashley Allison, and the co-founders of ExodUS Summit. At Plait/Form, we are asking how to deepen the Black feminist framework at the heart of our work and expand it into programming, writing, and community events that reach the women who need it most.

Desiree McCray, an author-poet-theologian, is doctoral candidate in Creative Writing and Public Theology at Pittsburgh Theological Seminary. As the founding editor of DJELI Journal, a transnational Black womanist publication, her scholarship theorizes Black women's grief and activism. Recently, she completed, "Prodigal: A Black Boy's Parable," a womanist midrash YA novel.

Plait/Form Project: DJELI Journal: A Transnational Black Womanist Literary Institution

DJELI Journal: A Transnational Black Womanist Literary Institution publishes creative and critical work centering Black women's voices globally.

COHORT PARTICIPANTS

As founding Editor-in-Chief, Desiree curates poetry, fiction, essays, and visual art that refuse marginalization and assert Black women's intellectual and creative authority. Through DJELI, she is building sustainable infrastructure for Black womanist storytelling across borders—creating not just a publication, but an institution that archives, amplifies, and advances Black feminist futures. At Plait/Form, she seeks guidance on expanding DJELI's reach, developing editorial frameworks rooted in womanist praxis, and positioning the journal as essential public scholarship that bridges academy, art, and activism.

Nicole Moore is a writer, activist, and the CEO/Founder of Moore Projects, where her work percolates at the intersections of culture change and community building. She's the founder of Black Harlem Lives, a social impact storytelling campaign. Her writing has been published in HuffPost, Essence, and The Root. Nicole's latest project is BCKBONE, a zine that encourages Black women to be bold.

Plait/Form Project: BCKBONE-- Zine & Anthology

Moved by the shocking death-by-suicide of Dr. Antoinette Candia-Bailey, a highly accomplished faculty member at the University of Missouri, Nicole created BCKBONE in February 2024 for Black women and femmes subjected to bullying and retaliation at work and at home. BCKBONE serves as a reminder that even, and maybe especially, in dark times we are our own best things. It connects women who may never have encountered Black feminism by name to its most essential truths: that we are worthy, that our healing matters, that our joy is a form of resistance. Distributed at laundromats, beauty salons, and on the streets, this zine disrupts traditional models of how Black feminist ideas reach people. The second issue of BCKBONE dropped in March and we are looking to scale up distribution and create an anthology

Plait/Form

A RAGE LAB Black Feminist
Public Works Incubator

COHORT PARTICIPANTS

Della V. Mosley

Black feminist healing wisdoms are transforming lives, and Dr. Della V. Mosley has spent twenty years expanding who gets to experience that. Scholar, healer, curator, and community organizer, they specialize in racial trauma and community-based healing, build ecosystems, train healers, and are bringing innagr8, a traveling Black feminist sanctuary, to life.

Plait/Form Project: innagr8

innagr8 scales the healing circle. Curated by liberation psychologist Dr. Della V. Mosley, it reimagines this intimate, proven form as a traveling festival-style gathering for the broader Black community, rooted in Black feminisms and trauma healing frameworks that center the flourishing of Black women, gender expansive, and queer folks. Attendees come for the day party, the open mic, the music, and the community. The healing meets them there, moving through every corner of the experience and resourcing them beyond it. Luxe in feel, accessible in price, and built to tour nationally, innagr8 is a new infrastructure for Black collective care.

Kendra Janelle Ross, PhD, is a Pittsburgh-based Black feminist scholar, award-winning musical artist, and social impact executive whose work sits at the intersection of cultural production and liberation. She is Head of Purpose & Experiences at Duolingo, a Partner at ACT3 Consulting Partners, and co-host of This Womanist Work podcast.

Plait/Form Project: This Womanist Work Podcast

This Womanist Work is a podcast for Black women doing the slow, necessary work of getting free. Hosted by Dr. Kendra Janelle Ross and Kelli King-Jackson, the show explores the intersections of faith, politics, pop culture, and womanist thought through the intimacy of a decades-long friendship.

COHORT PARTICIPANTS

Across 29 episodes, guests have included hip hop womanist EbonyJanice, CNN political commentator Ashley Allison, and the co-founders of ExodUS Summit. At Plait/Form, we are asking how to deepen the Black feminist framework at the heart of our work and expand it into programming, writing, and community events that reach the women who need it most.

NY native, Barrett Rosser is a daughter, seeker, lover, and poet. She is currently an Assistant Professor of Teacher Education and Professional Development at Morgan State University in Baltimore, Maryland. Her research interests include Black feminist epistemologies, including Black girlhood and Black girls' literacies, and practitioner research.

Plait/Form Project: The Black Girls' Literacies Project: Rendering and Archiving Black Girls' Literacies of Love

This project challenges hierarchies of epistemologies, primarily by privileging Black girls' literacies within a community of inquiry as they draw links among Black feminist literature and expansive notions of texts, their knowledge and practice of love, and the possibilities for their present and future selves in and outside of school spaces. What does it mean for girls to make their collective knowledge visible (or invisible) through the creation of multimodal renderings and artifacts? We will conduct inquiry group sessions with the goal of creating an archive that showcases their renderings and artifacts for public display and sharing.

Plait/Form

A RAGE LAB Black Feminist
Public Works Incubator

COHORT PARTICIPANTS

Shemeka Thorpe, PhD, is an award-winning sexuality educator, researcher, and Assistant Professor at the University of Kentucky. Her work centers Black women's sexual well-being through sex-positive and Black feminist frameworks. She is the CEO and Visionary of Black Feminist Praxis, a wellness and creative hub dedicated to the praxis pathways of knowing, dreaming, and being.

Plait/Form Project: Black Feminist Praxis

Black Feminist Praxis (BFP) is an organization Dr. Thorpe created to bridge research, reflection, and programming that centers the experiences of Black women and femmes. Through BFP, we develop workshops, writing spaces, and wellness-oriented events that encourage people to think critically about how Black feminist theory can be applied in everyday life. These offerings are grounded in what I describe as the Praxis Pathways of knowing, being, and dreaming. Knowing refers to the production and dissemination of research-based knowledge. Being refers to creating space for rest, reflection, and embodiment. Dreaming refers to cultivating creativity and visionary thinking about what liberated futures can look like. In addition, I am working on a book that serves as a guide and reflective tool for implementing Black feminist practices in social science research.

Christina A. Tillery is a counselor educator, researcher, and national trainer focused on Black girls' mental health and youth voice. Grounded in Black Feminist Thought and participatory methods, her work centers culturally sustaining practices that support belonging, healing, and thriving for Black youth in schools and communities.

Plait/Form Project: Black Girls Dream in Public

Black Girls Dream in Public is a collective digital storytelling and public scholarship project that centers Black girls and gender-expansive youth as creators of knowledge about mental health, belonging, and thriving. Through participatory workshops, participants engage in storytelling, photovoice, and collaborative media-making to reflect on their lived experiences and shape narratives on their own terms. The project will produce a digital storytelling campaign alongside a practical toolkit for educators, counselors, and community leaders. Grounded in Black feminist thought, this work amplifies youth voice, challenges deficit narratives, and offers accessible, culturally responsive approaches to supporting Black girls' wellbeing in schools and communities.

COHORT PARTICIPANTS

Tracee Worley is a designer who helps people practice the futures they're building toward. She grew up Black and working-class, inside a lineage of people who imagined freedom before they could touch it. That taught her imagination is serious work. Through Radical Futures, she makes that work tangible.

Plait/Form Project: Black Lady Liquidation Sale

Black women have been holding onto things we never asked for. The expectation to be strong. The requirement to make everyone comfortable. The 67 cents. The tone-policing. We inherited these burdens without a receipt, and nobody offered a return policy. Until now. The Black Lady Liquidation Sale is a speculative design project imagining Black women collectively offloading everything patriarchy made us carry. Part dollar store, part ritual, part relief. The project takes shape as satirical storefronts, participatory workshops, and immersive installations where we name what we've been holding, laugh at its absurdity, and PUT IT DOWN. Everything must go!

Plait/Form

A RAGE LAB Black Feminist
Public Works Incubator

FACILITATORS

Brittney Cooper, PhD, is Professor of Women's, Gender, and Sexuality Studies and Africana Studies at Rutgers University.

She is also the Principal Investigator for the Rutgers University RAGE Lab. She is the author of several books including the award-winning Beyond Respectability: The Intellectual Thought of Race Women (U of Illinois, 2017) and the New York Times' bestseller Eloquent Rage: A Black Feminist Discovers Her Superpower (St. Martin's, 2018).

Dr. Cooper is also an award-winning teacher, whose courses cover Black feminist theory, Hip Hop Studies, foundations of Africana Studies and Gender Studies, and Black women's intellectual history. She is a public scholar whose writing has been featured at the New York Times, Time Magazine, Cosmopolitan, and New York Magazine's The Cut. Her commentary has been featured on a range of shows at MSNBC (MSNOW). And her scholarly work has been supported by the Ford Foundation, Princeton University, the Ms. Foundation for Women, and the Mellon Foundation.

Takiyah Nur Amin, PhD, is a scholar, strategist, and faith leader whose work bridges Black dance studies, academic transformation, and progressive spiritual communities.

As a dance scholar and educator, her research explores Black aesthetics, cultural memory, and embodied knowledge across the African diaspora. Through her consulting practice, Black Girl Brilliance, she supports individuals and institutions in strategic planning, curricular innovation, inclusive hiring, faculty development, and academic advancement. Within Unitarian Universalist and progressive faith spaces, Dr. Amin is a sought-after writer and speaker whose work fosters reflection, justice-centered leadership, and ethical clarity at the intersection of faith, culture, and community.

FACILITATORS

Monica A. Coleman is John and Patricia Cochran Scholar for Inclusive Excellence and Professor of Africana Studies at the University of Delaware.

Coleman is the author or editor of six books including her award-winning memoir Bipolar Faith: a Black Woman's Journey with Depression and Making a Way Out of No Way: a Womanist Theology, required texts at theological schools around the country. Coleman is president of the Society for the Study of Black Religion and the host of the Diverse Devotions podcast about Black belief across boundaries. Coleman speaks widely on mental wellness, grief, loss and change, and religious diversity.

Monique Couvson, Ed.D., is an award-winning author, documentarian, philanthropic leader, and entrepreneur with nearly four decades of experience in the areas of education, civil rights, juvenile and criminal justice.

Recognized by TIME as a racial justice “Closer” in 2025 and by The Root 100 as one of the nation’s most influential African Americans in 2022, Dr. Couvson is the President and CEO of G4GC, a premier philanthropic intermediary focused on resourcing movements and organizations that center the wisdom and well-being of girls and gender expansive youth of color. She is a best-selling author of seven books, including Girls, Unlimited: How to Invest in Our Daughters with More than Money (The New Press, 2025) and Charisma’s Turn (The New Press, 2023), which was named by the American Library Association as one of the best graphic novels for teens. Dr. Couvson is an Executive Producer and co-writer of the documentary film, “PUSHOUT: The Criminalization of Black Girls in Schools,” which is based on two of Dr. Couvson’s books, Sing A Rhythm, Dance A Blues: Liberatory Education for Black and Brown Girls (The New Press, 2019) and Pushout: The Criminalization of Black Girls in Schools (The New Press, 2016). Her 2018 TED talk on how to stop the criminalization of Black girls in schools has received over 2 million views and been translated into 20 languages.

FACILITATORS

Tanya McKinnon is the founder of McKinnon Literary, where she represents serious nonfiction, upmarket fiction, children's books, and graphic novels.

Several of her clients are New York Times bestsellers and the prizes they have won include the National Book Award, The Pulitzer Prize, The Frederick Douglass Prize, The Whiting Award, The Cundhill, The Bancroft, The Robert F. Kennedy Book Award, The LA Times Award, Lambda Literary Award, The MacArthur, and many others. Growing up abroad and in the US, she graduated from Tufts University and holds an MA in cultural anthropology. She is a member of the Beacon Press board.

Brittany Packnett Cunningham

A force at the intersection of culture, justice, and policy, Brittany Packnett Cunningham drives transformation as the Founder and Principal of Love & Power Works, a social impact agency catalyzing change across industries and communities.

She currently serves as Vice President & Chief Strategy Officer of Children's Defense Fund, and as Host and Executive Producer of the acclaimed UNDISTRACTED podcast, the Webby's Best Belonging and Inclusion podcast of 2026.

Her TED Talk, "The Revolution of Confidence," has captivated over 8 million viewers worldwide and ranks among 2019's top ten most influential talks. Her voice resonates through the pages of New York Magazine, The Washington Post, and Cosmopolitan, with her debut book, "We Are Like Those Who Dream: Black Women's Blueprint for a New Power," forthcoming from One World/Random House.

FACILITATORS

Jamia Wilson is an award-winning writer, editor, speaker, and podcaster. She is Vice President and Executive Editor at Penguin Random House and previously directed the Feminist Press at CUNY and served as Vice President of Programs at the Women's Media Center.

She is the author of Make Good Trouble, This Book Is Feminist, Young, Gifted, and Black, and other titles. She serves on the boards of the Omega Institute, ERA Coalition, and Center for Reproductive Rights and co-hosts the podcast Ordinary Equality. She is committed to writing and amplifying stories that reimagine power and rewrite the rules.

RAGE LAB FACULTY STRATEGIST

Anna (Enobong) Branch, PhD, is a scholar and strategist who helps move organizations and leaders from well-meaning to well-doing.

She previously served as the senior vice president for equity at Rutgers University, providing strategic leadership to foster an inclusive organizational climate. A professor of sociology, Dr. Branch's research explores the historical roots and contemporary underpinnings of racial and gender inequality.

She is the author of Opportunity Denied: Limiting Black Women to Devalued Work, the editor of Pathways, Potholes, and the Persistence of Women in Science: Reconsidering the Pipeline, and the co-author of Black in America: The Paradox of the Color Line and most recently,

FACILITATORS

Work in Black and White: Striving for the American Dream.

A sought-after national expert, her public opinion pieces have appeared in the New Jersey Star-Ledger (nj.com) and national outlets, such as Bloomberg and The Washington Post. Dr. Branch received her Ph.D. in sociology from the University at Albany, SUNY, and her B.S. in biology from Howard University.

MINDFULNESS SPECIALIST

Joan Collier, PhD, is a higher education scholar-practitioner with a background in student affairs administration, critical qualitative research, and organizational effectiveness for culture, leadership development, and inclusion.

More broadly, Joan is a full-spectrum, breath to death doula and secular chaplain who supports wellbeing across the lifespan and lived experience.

Plait/Form

A RAGE LAB Black Feminist
Public Works Incubator

NOTES

Plait/Form

A RAGE LAB Black Feminist
Public Works Incubator

NOTES

Plait/Form

A RAGE LAB Black Feminist
Public Works Incubator

NOTES

Plait/Form

A RAGE LAB Black Feminist
Public Works Incubator

NOTES

Plait/Form

A RAGE LAB Black Feminist
Public Works Incubator

NOTES

Plait/Form

A RAGE LAB Black Feminist
Public Works Incubator

NOTES

Plait/Form

A RAGE LAB Black Feminist
Public Works Incubator

